Now in its 24th year, the IFPDA Print Fair has long been a one-stop shop for the best in the world of editions, from brand new works by leading contemporary artists to rare historic finds. Often, many of the works on display won't be found at other art fairs, where non-editioned paintings and sculpture tend to take the spotlight. And similarly, much of the art has a more manageable price point—fantastic works can be had for under $10,000. But that's not to say that you can't go over the million-dollar mark with an edition. Below we highlight some of our favorite finds, across price points, at this year's fair.

Mexican artist Jimenez mixes cultural references from past and present to come up with his witty subject matter. The old accounting forms on which he's printed this series provide a strangely appealing and nostalgic background for the subject matter—a topographical landscape cross-section engulfing a boom box, like it's one of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World.
