Having previously delivered diverse exhibitions shipped "Straight from Berlin" and "Straight from Spain," Olmos Park's Ruiz-Healy Art engages in an artistic exchange with Galería Karen Huber for "Straight from Mexico City." Organized by curator and critic Octavio Avendaño Trujillo, the group show brings together artists Eugenia Martínez (Mexico), Kanako Namura (Japan), Manuel Solano (Mexico) and Rafael Uriegas (Spain) to collectively question "the cultural context of our time and the history of painting itself with a critical construction of identity set forth in a pictorial practice." As part of the exchange, Galería Karen Huber will exhibit works by four artists from Ruiz-Healy's stellar roster (Nate Cassie, Constance Lowe, Cecilia Biagini and Jesse Amado) in June.
