

SAN ANTONIO
CURRENT

Wednesday, January 25, 2017

10 Things You Have to Do This Weekend

Posted By Rachel Cooley on Wed, Jan 25, 2017 at 4:14 pm

Page 2 of 10

Thu 1/26 - Sat 1/28

“On the Curve”

Nicolás Leiva

“On the Curve,” a show that focuses on the multitude of possibilities within the realm of curvilinear artwork, is the latest from Olmos Park’s Ruiz-Healy Art. The group exhibit, which runs through February 25, features the work of artists Constance Lowe, Jesse Amado, Andrés Ferrandis, Nicolás Leiva, Nate Cassie, Laura Anderson Barbata, Ricky Armendariz and Ethel Shipton. While the curvilinear aspects are clearly evident in the clean lines and precise curves, each artist offers their own unique perspective, concerns, personality and process in the pieces. The resulting whole presents a compelling argument that within even the most rigid forms, endless permutations and explorations are possible based on an artist’s particular pursuit/approach. As the exhibit announcement explains, these artists “delve into curvilinear shapes and forms with a bold intellectual and playful practice using art history as an impetus.” Free, 11am-4pm Thu-Sat, Ruiz-Healy Art, 201-A E. Olmos Drive, (210) 804-2219, ruizhealyart.com. — James Courtney